

Dear faculty and staff,

Time is going by quickly as we are one-third of the way through the semester. And, we are a short three weeks away from spring break. I hope that your semester is going well. As always, I am deeply grateful to each of you for the direction, dedication, and care that you provide to our students. I wanted to write to you with some updates

I am pleased that we are working to build and support our transfer student population. Recently, we signed an MOU with Texas Southmost College to provide a seamless transfer experience for students interested in any of our academic programs. Additionally, we are restructuring our _____ program to facilitate the onboarding of all new transfer students. Finally, we will soon launch new transfer guides on the Academic Affairs webpage to assist students who are considering transferring to SHSU.

Artificial Intelligence Mini-Conference

Please save the afternoon of March 26 for a mini-conference on artificial intelligence featuring a keynote by Jason Giffard. Watch some of the details here or contact us if you have any questions.

Victory Voices and Office Hours

Join Ted Stuberfield for one of our newest campus podcasts “Victory Voices: Aiding Student Success,” which tells stories of student success through peer educators. The first episode features peer educator Ashtin Pyle.

Later this semester, I will release two more episodes of “
